

How About This Little Girl?

he other day I met a young person who impressed me so much! She was marching herself around the beach with her mom in tow (instead of the other way around) handing out small shells to anyone who would take her gift. Her mother made her ask every person, "Would you like a shell? Can I set it on the beach for you and then you can pick it up?"

So Bill and I exchanged shells with this young person, and later on in the pool we watched her swim from end to end using killer strokes in both freestyle and breast stroke. Her mom was nearby so we started chatting, and found out that although the girl has 3 older brothers they build "pretend businesses" and elect her to be the president "because she makes us get going." After sharing shells and demonstrating her swimming skills she swam up toward me and said, "That was not my best breast stroke, I commit to practicing it more" as she laughed and kicked away to play.

Imagine my surprise when her mom told me, "She is so ready to try anything and learn anything. She is super-mad

HOW ABOUT THIS LITTLE GIRL?

---

because there's a boat ride at Universal she wants to do, and they won't let her." I asked why not. The mom said, "Well, you have to be 6 years old and she is only 3."

Honestly, I was completely shocked. I knew she was small, but she acted like she was at least 5 or 6. I said, "Well, she is president over your older boys right now, maybe she will be President one day."

What I love about this little girl is her commitment to life. She's all in. She's honest with herself. She's a little bossy. She's an explorer, an adventurer. She's fearless. We could all take lesson from her in fearlessness. In being willing to explore and try without worrying about failure, too.

To your sweet success and a great week of exploring,

Sue Painter

PS I promised to let you know when my How to Write Effective Emails article was available, and it's published now! See if you find one tip that will help you, and let me know. Here's the link: confidentmarketer.com/how-to-write-effective-emails.